

Oracle Fusion Middleware

Oracle Fusion Middleware is a set of integrated products that form a comprehensive platform for running enterprise applications.

Content Management

Develop flexible, secure applications using tools and languages appropriate to your data and application requirements.

Ease of Management

Oracle's enterprise management tools give you a complete view of all your systems, allowing for proactive management.

Unified, Flexible Access

Oracle Fusion Middleware provides the tools your workforce needs to stay connected, collaborate, and work from any location.

Hot-Pluggable Third-Party Components

Because Oracle Fusion Middleware is all based on industry-accepted standards, standards-compliant third-party components can be "plugged in." Alternatively, Oracle Fusion Middleware components can be used in other heterogeneous IT environments.

Leverage Existing Processes

New tools from Oracle allow you to automate human and system workflows, helping improve the efficiency of your business.

All Data Integrated

Oracle's hubs and other components let you synchronize information from your entire enterprise, providing easier content management and comprehensive data analysis.

Security

Oracle's comprehensive identity and access management infrastructure safeguards your information, systems, and applications.

SOA Standards-Based Framework

Service-oriented architecture (SOA) is a way of building software applications that promotes connectivity between components so developers can reuse them. SOA implements business functionality as a set of shared, reusable services that are platform-, language-, and OS-independent.

Unbreakable Foundation

Oracle Fusion Middleware is founded on the principles of Oracle Fusion Architecture, a blueprint for building a highly available, standards-based enterprise computing system.

Application Server

The foundation of Oracle Fusion Middleware is Oracle Application Server 10g, the only applications platform designed for grid computing that also supports SOA.

Data Analysis

Oracle Fusion Middleware allows you to incorporate all of your data and provides tools for analyzing that data.
