How Oracle Helps

Financial Refresh

Your total cost of ownership may be much lower with a refreshed hardware infrastructure. Greater processing power, smaller footprint, lower energy consumption, and reduced support costs all add up to substantial advantages for your entire IT operation.

Oracle offers solutions like sale-leaseback and credit-back structures to optimize balance sheet and income statement considerations for both hardware and software assets, so you can turn accounting constraints into acquisition tools.

Portfolio Leverage

If you are currently making payments under an Oracle finance or lease agreement, you have the unique opportunity to extend payment terms, even using the same payment amount and frequency, to create new spending power.

Oracle offers solutions like lease rollover or consolidation options, so you can refresh technology that hasn't yet reached end of accounting or service life.

Asset Extension, Redeployment, Retirement

An asset's accounting book life rarely matches its ultimate use and service term. And the retirement of hardware systems comes with a range of regulatory requirements, data security considerations, environmental concerns, and other issues.

Oracle offers a range of solutions for extending or redeploying IT systems. With Trade-in and Upgrade Allowance Programs, Oracle provides value for your aging infrastructure, from cash payments to discount based on fair market value. These programs can assist with the cost of upgrading your systems, further offsetting the remaining book value of your existing assets.
