Engage Black Friday shoppers early and online this holiday season

As we head into the year’s busiest shopping season, consumers and retailers face new challenges from ongoing inflation, hiked interest rates, and labor shortages. However, while the economy’s negative aspects can seem gloomy, retailers are pushing on, promoting sale events to encourage spending earlier in the season.

This is welcomed news to consumers, whom rate deals and promotions as the top concern in holiday spending, creating even more hype around this year’s Cyber Five event (Thanksgiving through Cyber Monday). Online sales are projected to reach over $38 billion within this time period alone. Still, with 22% of adults already beginning their holiday shopping, it’s best to get the jump on advertising to make the shopping list.

Looking at Oracle’s Contextual Intelligence, we’ve seen content categorizations related to Black Friday begin to lift in July with Prime Day deals, rising again in September, then extending beyond the critical sales period at Thanksgiving.

To reach consumers in the active planning and shopping mindset, advertisers can target Black Friday and Cyber Monday content, as well as many other categories with Oracle Contextual Intelligence segments. Additionally, advertisers can leverage past holiday purchase behaviors to find relevant shoppers with Oracle Audiences.
