New Year, New You! Kicking off ’22 with a personal growth mindset

New Year’s Day shifts the consumer mindset from holiday gluttony to personal development. While the pandemic may have played a role in the items consumers purchased, New Year’s resolutions themselves hardly change. For instance, when comparing the past three years, the top resolutions have been focused on new skills, money, and physical/mental health.

Fitness, of course, sees the most significant spike in engagement. Still, like many activities in 2021, health was centered around the home, with highly sought-after exercise equipment and the latest smart wellness gadgets in high demand. While athleisure will continue to be a hot item year on year, we suspect consumers will venture out of the home and back into the gym, along with travel and socially inclined hobbies popping up with a newfound enthusiasm.
